RICHMOND AS SHE IS,

With a Number of Suggestions as to What She Should Be.

HER NATURAL ADVANTAGES SUMMED UP.

A Long Pull, a Strong Pull, and a Pull All Together What is Needed to Make Her Forge Ahead.

Mr. Editor,—It seems to be understood that with the opening of spring there will be a determined effort made all along the line to secure greater business development and more rapid progress, particularly in the real estate business, both in Richmond and throughout the State. That a general, steady and healthy advance is possible, and the material prosperity of the city much accelerated, is perfectly manifest to those who are dispassion-ately considering the situation.

OUR NATURAL ADVANTAGES.

OUR NATURAL ADVANTAGES.

There are here great natural and acquired advantages which, if properly used, would speedily bring such a tide of prosperity as would bear upon its bosom a wealth of growth and real advance in every department of business. More than a score of cities that but a short time ago had a smaller population than Richmond have already outstripped her in the race, and some of them many hundred per cent. From being the fifteenth city in population in the United States, she is now the thirty-fifth. The others have gone up ahead. Nashville, Atlanta and Memphis, and a dozen others of less population, are pushing her rapidly in the race for the next decade. As a rule, the whole question of the progress and development of a city can be reduced to a mathematical problem.

Given certain surroundings, so much push and enterprise of her citizens, so much inducement to outside capital and activity to come in, such a condition of newspaper liberality and energy, and your increase is so much.

The SOUTHERN TIDE.

THE SOUTHERN TIDE.

But this is modified favorably in our case on account of the recent movement of meney and business toward the South. The tide has turned very manifestly from the West in this direction. The time has arrived in our affairs "which, if taken at the flood," will lead us on to fortune. This is shown by the phenomenal growth in Georgia, Alabama, and other Southean cities. It has come to Virginia, and is coming to Richmond if energetic efforts are put forth by us to take advantage of it.

How not to do it is as easy as rolling off a

How not to do it is as easy as rolling off a log. It is only necessary to offer no inducement or encouragement to outside capital and men to come here; for the papers to avoid on all occasions any mention or encouragement of the manifold enterprises here, without pay; to keep on adopting as a rule for street improvements the Arkansas Traveler's idea about the roof of his house, which was very full of holes and very leaky—"When it don't rain it can't be fixed, and when it don't rain it don't need fixing," to build up all the rest of the State and trust in the Lord for Richmond, to keep the town within its present area, of five square miles, and advertise its death rate as heavier than any other city in the United States except Charlottesville; to allow the railroads to continue to make a way-station of Richmond, instead of coming into it. That and a few other plans that might be mentioned will help wonderfully in diverting capital away from us and give a good show for the new enterprises of the South elsewhere that are reaching out their hands and offering lands and money and everthing to induce immigration and capital. Of course it is very easy to find fault; any-body can do that, and advice is usually very cheap on the market.

PROFITABLE EUGGESTIONS.

But often a suggestion, an idea, even the calling attention to facts perfectly patent.

But often a suggestion, an idea, even the calling attention to facts perfectly patent, will do good. To bring manufacturers here, to bring in population and add to the prosperity of the cityrequires effort, and plenty of it; requires united and unflagging zeal and perseverence, requires a wide range of thought and action; but it can be done, and successfully done. For this "consummation devoutly to be wished," the present status can be very materially improved in several respects.

OUR NEEDS.

OUR NEEDS.

There is needed here a wide and generous liberality on the part of the press in advertising all the growing industries of the city, in taking new enterprises by the hand in the most whole souled manner, giving them in every case a big "send off." and encouraging them by kindly notices and attention afterwards. Such a course might not bring at once so many shekels into the coffers of the newspaper, but would advantage them more in the long run, in the added prosperity that would be brought about. The manufacturing, commercial, and real estate interests of the city should have the fostering care of the press their condition kept before the public by free advertisement and constant individual mention, and the most herculean efforts should be put forth to advertise the city's advantages in the North, so as thereby to induce Northern capital and immigration.

WHATOTHER CITIES HAVE DONE. OUR NEEDS.

WHAT OTHER CITIES HAVE DONE.

Atlanta, Chattanooga, and Chicago owe their success to-day to the energy and liberality and progressive spirit of their press. Through its instrumentality these cities, and many other Western cities are rapidly passing all their competitors in the race, and the press at the same time has reaped a magnificent harvest; and something must be done and done at once, or the tide of prosperity flowing this way will flow around us to the building up of Norfolk and Roanoke and other places, but leaving us the consciousness that the golden opportunities were not embraced. If we had one-fourth of the energy and push as many of the cities of the new South, Richmond would forge ahead with tremendous strides.

It is not denied that the papers of Richmond are doing a great deal of good, but that they are not doing what they might and what they ought to do.

A DETRIMENT TO THE CITY.

A DETERMENT TO THE CITY.

A perhabilish to the city is its narrow, contracted limits. The death report for 1890 gives to Richmond the frightfully high rate of twenty-eight for each one thousand of population, thus making it, with the exception of Charleston and one other city, the most unhealthy city in the United States. This is partly owing to its large colored population, but mainly because of its small area of only five and one-fourth square miles. Chicago has eighty-five, Philadelphia twenty-mine square miles, and generally the cities, by taking in the suburbs, have many times the area of Richmond, and consequently a much larger proportionate population.

Such an advertisement does Richmond incalculable harm. Some of the cities have only twelve and fourteen, and the average is only about twenty, against Richmond's twenty-eight. The pretext that the city could not make improvements in the additional area is altogether unsatisfactory, and was not thought of for a moment in the case of the other cities. The West End and the East End, the North End and Manchester ought all to be taken into the city limits. The rate of taxation would, of course, be somewhat increased, but the advantages to the city and the properties annexed would be very great.

OUR RALBOADS.

So much has been said in the press and on

OUR RAILROADS.

So much has been said in the press and on the street about the importance of an elegant first-class hotel, that it seems to be unnecessary to dwell upon it. All agree about this all appreciate its importance. It would bring hundreds of visitors instead of tens, and thousands of dollars instead of tens, and thousands of dollars instead of hundreds. But this would come, of course, if by some power the railroads could be induced to make Richmond a railroad town instead of a way-station. The Chesapeake and Ohio dumps its passengers from Cincinnati from its sleeper a hundred miles out, and runs a hittle one-horse train through the town. It really runs its passengers through to Washington, giving a diminutive service to Richmond. The Norfolk and Western gives Richmond the go by. The only through railroad—the Coast Line—would have been driven out of the city and compelled to establish its depot four miles out, running littleside trains here, but for the energetic work of Mr. Purcell and the Chamber of Commerce. Except for the Coast Line all the travel from the South and the Westenver by any possibility passes through Richmond.

Right here is the grandest opportunity for OUR RAILBOADS, change. Of course, as long as the community submits nothing will be done.

But much can be accomplished in this direction. It will take time and great effort, but it will pay magnificently, to make Richmond a railroad town instead of a way station, and its success is assured.

Then "we shall blossom as the rose." Then we can say of our financial prosperity as we are now saying of the season: "For lot the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the time of the singing of birds has come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in the land."

Yours,
Richmond, April 17, 1891.

BIG RAILROAD DEAL.

A Pretty Marriage-Visit of Rev. Edmund Tilley, Missionary to Brazil.

BRISTOL, TENN., April 18 .- [Special.]-A pleasant and happy marriage was solemnized

Bristol, Tenn., April 18.—[Special.]—A pleasant and happy marriage was solemnized here last night, in which Mr. Frank Cratz, a civil engineer of this city, and Miss Anna Jones, corner of Seventh and Shelb streets, were the participants. Rev James W. Moore, paster of Mary-street M. E. church, was the officiating minister.

The oreus of Arlington & Washburn, which has just left this city, is recognized at this place as the biggest fraud that was ever practiced on a civilized people. Five thousand people were in attendance at their show last night in Fairmount. They failed to meet their contract at the concert, and a few men of the town undertook to drive them to it. A bloody battle would have ensued had it not been for the timely appearance of a dozen blue-coats, who dispersed them as quickly as the dew before the morning sun.

Rev. Edmund Tilley, a missionary to Brazil from the Holston Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is visiting home folks. He has been in Brazil more than three years, and tells wonderful stories of his adventures there and his associations with the natives. He will return to his foreign field of labor in the course of two months.

A big deal is on the tapis. Some weeks ago Messrs, Scott and Clyde, of the S. A. and O. nailroad, arrived in this city from New York, and spent a few days prospecting in the city and inspecting their line of railroad from here to Big Stone Gap. It was thought at the time that their visit was more significant, and it has since transpired that this is the case. It is reported to-day that they will purchase the Bristol, Elizabethton and North Carolina railroad, the gr ding of which is almost completed from here to Mountain City, a distance of about seventy miles. If they do this it will be extended from here to Wilkesbarre, N. C. As the S. A. and O. connects with the Lonisville and Nashville at Big Stone Gap, this will give another trunk line from ocean to gulf.

A Boon to Nursing Mothers and Invalids

A Boon to Nursing Mothers and Invalids.

Our interests have scarcely commenced and taken root in Richmond ere we perceive a laudable desire on the part of its citizens to know more about our Export Beer, and we are glad to answer any questions they may ask. We spent two years—two earnest years—in solving the question, "Can a pure beer be brewed?" and we say, "Yes, it can."

We can truthfully say that our Export Breuage is as near the pure as it is possible to get it. It contains hops and malt, and only the vory best of these have been used no coloring matter whatever has been introduced, and none will be. It is a sound, wholesome, exhilarating brewage, and is especially recommended to the weak, to invalids and to nursing mothers; to these it gives tone, strength and nourishment; the froth is rich and creamy, the taste agreeable and the effect exhibitanting and healthful; as a general appetizer and stomach tonic it is invaluable, especially in this climate, and it undoubtedly will fortify the system against miasmatic and pestilential attacks; it is a powerful neutralizer of the stomachic acids, and a certain corrective and promoter of digestion. A pure malt liquor, such as we claim ours to be, is invigorating, serviceable in cases of debility, refreshing and sustaining in the sick room and supporting to delicate, enervated mothers and females during all seasons of the year, and that it is highly nutritive, no one who has the slightest knowledge of practical brewing will attempt to deny. Oldest Scottish Insurance Institution.

The Caledonian Insurance Company, of Edinburgh, Scotland, has made the deposit required by our State laws with State Treasurer Harman, having purchased Richmond city 4 per cent, bonds for this purpose, and is now authorized to do business in Virginia.

The "Caledonian" is chartered under the laws of Great Britain with a subscribed capital of $5,000,000, which, under the laws of that kingdom, the stockholders are bound for, and in addition they have accumulations which make their capital and assets amount to over $5,000,000. This grand old company commenced business in 1805, and although it has been doing business in this country a little over a year, its income last vear in the United States was over $5,00,000, and its assets now held for the protection of the people of this country amount to over $1,000,000, which is far ahead of any other foreign company in so short a time. Our merchants and business men will no doubt be glad to secure the policies of this excellent old company.

ANCIENT AND MODERN BUILDINGS.

Different Styles in Richmond-The Medical College, The Capitol, New City Hall, and Private Dwellings.

[For The Times.]

Thursday afternoon was bright and balmy. Fragrant flowers, bursting buds and happy birds basked in the mild sunshine of an April day. The virgin beauties of the spring time enticed weary workers and toiling students to lay aside books and cares and ramble abroad Accordingly an invitation from Professor Pollard, of Richmond College, to his class in English history to accompany him on a ton through the city was eagerly accepted. object of the expedition was to study the various styles of architecture displayed in the principal buildings of the city.

principal buildings of the city.

PROGRESS OF ARCHITECTURE.

Architecture, like all the other arts, has had a gradual development. An old writer describes the earliest stage in the progress of this art as an attempt on the part of primitive man to imitate the nests of birds and the lairs of heasts. At first arbors were constructed of twigs of trees, then walls of dried turf, strengthened with reeds and branches. From huts to houses the progress was gradual and easy. The aim of architecture as an art, however, is not simply to build for utility, but to so arrange the parts of a structure as to give to it unity, grandeur and beauty.

EQUITIAN WONDERS.

The oldest specimens of architecture in the

The oldest specimens of architecture in the world, perhaps, are found in Egypt. Her massive pyramids, her giant sphynx, probably older than the pyramids, and the ruins of her magnificent temples, are among the wonders of the world.

ders of the world.

And yet these were but the beginnings of the art. Domes and arches and minarets, which give such charming variety of outline, were unknown to the Egyptians.

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE.

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE.

The Virginia Medical College building is an admirable specimen of the Egyptian style. The massive pyramidal pilasters, the winged globes, the columns with receding base and capitals resembling inverted bells—these are the peculiar characteristics of this ancient style of architecture.

Crossing over from the Medical College to the State Capitol we pass from the Egyptian to the Grecian style.

The GRECIAN STYLE.

The ancient Greeks had three favorite

THE GRECIAN STYLE.

The ancient Greeks had three favorite modes of expression in architectural art—Doric, Ionic and Corinthian—distinguished mainly by the capitals on the columns. Vitruvius, the only ancient writer on this art whose works have come down to us, accounts for the origin of these styles somewhat as follows: The Doric, which is the most massive and severe, imitates the strength and dignity of a man; the Ionic, which is more ornate, represents the delicacy and refinement of a woman, while the Corinthian, which is the most ornate, symbolizes the beauty and ornaments of a youthful maiden.

THE CAPITOL. THE CAPITOL.

Our State Capitol represents the Ionic style, which appears in the voluted capitals of the The corner-stone of this historic old build-

In corner-stone of this instolled at the sing was laid in 1785.

Thomas Jefferson, who was then minister to France, sent over plans suggested by certain buildings that he had seen and admired in France, and those plans were adopted, with some modifications.

GRECIAN DORIC.

The Second Baptist church is the best specimen of the Grecian Doric style in the city. The massive fluted columns, the plain square capitals and the heavy entablature, all conspire to give to the facade an imposing appearance. The First Baptist church is also Doric, with slightly ornamented frieze.

COBINTRIAN STYLE.

COBINTRIAN STYLE.

For a magnificent specimen of the Corinthian style we go to St. Paul's church, corner of Ninth and Grace streets.

Here also we find fluted columns, but the richly carved capitals present a striking contrast to the strong simplicity of the Doric.

Professor Pollard reminded the party that the wire gauze over those beautiful capitals was not an essential part of the architecture, but was put there to prevent birds from building nests on the columns.

The base of the steeple of St. Paul's is Egyptian, but higher up the Corinthian style is again observed.

The columns in the library at Richmond College also represent the Corinthian style. The college building, however, is mainly of the French renaissance, having mansard roof, and projections over the windows.

THE COTHIC.

Seventh-street Christian church affords an excellent illustration of a style that has been very popular in Europe for several centuries, and is found in a large number of churches in America—namely, the Gothic style, of which the pointed arch is the distinguishing characteristic.

teristic.

The new City Hall is mainly Gothic, though perhaps more accurately illustrating the transition period in English architecture from the Norman touche Gothic.

Grace-street Presbyterian church is a beautiful example of the decorated Gothic style.

THE NORMAN.

The Norman—heavy columns, rounded capitals, and circular arches—may be seen in the new Grace-street Baptist church, not yet completed.

THE QUEEN ANNE STYLE.

Another style that has long been popular in England and America, and that seems to be coming more and more into favor, is what is known as the Queen Anne style. It is distinguished by a combination of gables, cylindrical bay windows and Norman arches. This seems to be the favorite style for private residences in Richmond to-day. The elegant mansion recently erected by Mr. Ginter on West Franklin street is a combination of Queen Anne, Norman-Gothic and Moorish styles.

MASONIC TEMPLE.

MASONIC TEMPLE.

Professor Pollard pointed out the interesting combinations employed in the unfinished Masonic Temple on Broad street. The clustered pillars seen on the facade remind one of certain features of Westminster Abbev, while the columns at the northwest extrance belong to the Moorish or Byzantine style.

The lingering rays of the setting sun were kissing lofty spires and budding tree-tops a smiling "good-night," and shedding a halo of glory are und the Lee monument, as the happy party returned from their delightful ramble.

ANCIENT ASCHITECTURE.

ANCIENT ASCHITTECTURE.

This interesting study carries the imagination through the long, dm aisies of past ages, and as we linger annut the massive ruins of ancient architecture, we are deeply impressed with the vast expenditure of time and labor and money displayed in the erection and embellishment of edifices which must sooner or later yield to the destructive forces of nature and expressed into their original elements. But the most interesting fact, perhaps, in connection with this subject, is that the most perfect forms of architecture in all ages are found in temples erected for either Pagan or Christian worship. No other class of buildings, public or private, can compare with heathen temples and Christian churches in grandeur and beauty.

HEATHEN TEMPLES.

The ruins of Egyptian temples that were grand and imposing in their simplicity, the temple of Solomon at Jerusalem, withits massive walls, its tesselated floors and richty gilded decorations the temple of Diana at Ephesus, one of the seven wonders of the world, and the numberless, costly and beautiful Christian temples of Europe and America, representing all commendable styles and combinations of architectural art, bear witness to the fact that the five great continents have all given special prominence to buildings for religious purposes.

And is it not eminently appropriate that man, the crowning work of the Divine Architect, should dedicate the richest fruits of his genius and toil to him who has promised a permanent home in the House not made with hands to each honest believer and true worshipper?
